

Private Psychologist Assessments

The SEAG Single Entrance transfer tests are not regulated exams, therefore any private psychologist's report submitted for transfer purposes cannot be used as evidence to support access arrangements in post primary school.

The post primary school must be able to demonstrate evidence from over a period of time for a pupil to qualify for access arrangements. The school is under no obligation to follow any advice or recommendations from private reports which, in the SENCo's professional opinion (and the school's experience of working with the young person), conflicts with the presentation of the pupil in school.

JCQ would consider the school submitting a private report that has been commissioned by the parent prior to the exam, and that is not consistent with the pupil's normal way of working in school, to have the potential to constitute malpractice which may impact on the candidate's results.

Please be aware that all schools must comply with JCQ regulations. This leaflet has been produced following consultation with CCEA and JCQ.

Exam Stress

Exam stress is a usual and common part of the examination process. Schools offer advice to students taking examinations on how to cope with pressure. Parents can offer support at home by suggesting the use of the taught strategies.

Below are some useful websites which provide information about how to support pupils to manage examination stress that they may experience.

What are Access Arrangements?

Access arrangements are how 'reasonable adjustments' are made for pupils who have a disability, special educational need or a temporary injury that has a substantial effect on their performance in examinations.

Access arrangements are based on need and must reflect the pupil's normal way of working on a regular basis when taking tests and exams as observed in school over a period of time.

Where possible, access arrangements which enable a young person to work independently are encouraged e.g. using a computer reader instead of a reader. This also helps prepare for further education.

What are Reasonable Adjustments?

The Joint Council for Qualifications (JCQ) bases its guidance on the Equality Act (UK) 2010. This requires that awarding bodies to make a reasonable adjustment where a candidate who is disabled would be at a substantial disadvantage in comparison to someone who is not disabled without a reasonable adjustment being made.

Access arrangements do not change the skills or knowledge being tested and must not give a pupil an unfair advantage.

What is the definition of Disability?

The Equality Act (UK) 2010 defines disability as a physical or mental impairment that has both a substantial and a long-term adverse effect on the ability of someone to carry out their normal day to day activities. This statutory guidance states that disability is more than the normal differences in ability that exists between young people.

Who decides the access arrangements required for GCSE and A Level examinations?

The evidence of need required by JCQ, is based on teachers' observations, and evidence must be collated by the SENCo before the school applies to JCQ for access arrangements. The SENCo stores the evidence gathered for each pupil and is required to produce this evidence for the JCQ Inspector. JCQ annually publishes regulations and guidance relating to access arrangements.

All schools and colleges are bound by JCQ, and their stipulations must be adhered to.

JCQ regulations state that schools must be able to demonstrate a history of need and consistent use of reasonable adjustments to support formal applications for a pupil's access arrangements.

Does the pupil need to be assessed by an Educational Psychologist to qualify for Access Arrangements?

An assessment by an Educational Psychologist is not a requirement. The SENCo is normally the school's designated qualified assessor. The SENCo takes the lead on the access arrangements process within the school. Teaching staff support the SENCo in identifying, determining, and implementing appropriate access arrangements.

If a pupil has a SEN, a medical diagnosis or a physical condition are they automatically entitled to access arrangements?

A determination of SEN or a medical diagnosis/physical condition itself, does not automatically entitle a pupil to access arrangements.

The pupil will need to have been observed as being substantially disadvantaged in taking school tests and exams to be awarded access arrangements. The teachers in school will have observed and recorded the pupil's normal way of working over a period of time, not just before external exams.

JCQ state that the SENCo's detailed information, must be supported by specialist evidence confirming the candidate's disability.
